Personal view

By A Customer

This collection of interviews doesn't really give a overall view of the war. It does give the view from a very personal perspective. The interviews range from the grunt in the field, to nurses, to higher commands. I got the feeling the histories given reflected what the experience did to the interviewees afterword more than during the experience. It sounded like it would be something you heard in a Vietnam support group. Nonetheless, interesting reading.

Personal - Very Real

By Donna Lloyd

This book makes you feel you are sitting with each veteran as they recall situations they experienced during the war. I love the fact that the grammar was basically kept "as narrated", instead of polishing and sugar-coating what they actually said. I really appreciate the openness of each veteran in this book, and sometimes even felt their pain/confusion - at least to some degree. I would recommend to anyone that wants to learn more of the reality of war-time experiences. Very good.

Very Unique Summation of Vietnam

By Chad R. Reihm

This book takes a very unique approach to narrating the history of the Vietnam war. It allows individuals to tell their stories of their experience, but does so in chronological order. So what you get first is a story about welcoming Americans to the war i.e. getting off the plane to see a corpse fall out of the bag...welcome to nam and what you get last is a get out of Saigon before it falls story. The stories are varied, covering special ops and grunt units to hospital and airforce views. Some stories are very short while some linger on, but all of them have heart and truly show a side not usually seen with the battle histories.

I thoroughly enjoyed this book and believe anyone with any interest in America's involvement in Vietnam would also. It is very cheap and is a quick read and will improve your knowledge of history...all three great qualities!
