Who was better: Chamberlain or Russell, or Magic or Bird? Cohen, a fan and sports historian, rates the best centers, power forwards, small forwards, shooting guards, and point guards across five eras of professional basketball ("Set Shot," 1946–60; "Superstar," 1961–75; "Bird/Magic," 1976–90; "Slam Dunk," 1991–2005; and "Free Agent," 2006–12). The five best—plus honorable mentions—are ranked with justifications. For example, Cohen uses statistics, championships, honors, and reputation to show why he selected Hakeem Olajuwon ahead of Shaquille O'Neal, David Robinson, Patrick Ewing, and Alonzo Mourning. Recommended for all libraries with a sports collection, suitable for circulation. --Abbie Landry

Say it isn't so—the Big O on the second team and the incomparable Dr J on the fifth team? That may be hard to swallow but that is where we'll find Oscar Robertson and Julius Erving in Cohen's all time all-star basketball volume. Spanning six pro eras from the set shot age to the advent of free agents, Cohen selects an all-star team from each period—first and second teams. Cohen, author of numerous sports books, uses statistics (offensive and defensive), sustained excellence, and input from writers, coaches, and players to compare players at each of five positions from each era. A daunting task indeed but Cohen pulls it off and the result is a highly entertaining reference volume. He includes a preface and introduction to explain his objective and criteria. . . . [H]is all star teams are the book's features. (American Reference Books Annual)

The history of the NBA has been filled with superstars, names known to fans and non-fans alike. But while comparisons between athletes who competed against each other face-to-face is a common occurrence in the sports world, it is not quite as easy to compare players from different eras. How would Wilt Chamberlain stack up against Shaquille O'Neal? What about LeBron James and Larry Bird, or Magic Johnson and Oscar Robertson? In Pro Basketball's All-Time All-Stars: Across the Eras, Robert Cohen not only examines the best players from each era, but also ranks the five greatest players at each position in the history of the pro game.

Dividing the history of professional basketball into five distinct eras, this book first describes the style of play that prevailed during each period. From the slow-paced, rough-and-tumble style of play that characterized the NBA during its formative years, to the up-tempo, high-flying style that currently prevails, Pro Basketball's All-Time All-Stars gives an in-depth view of how the game has evolved. For each of the five eras, Cohen has selected the best players to man the five positions on the court, providing career bios for each. To determine the best of the best, Cohen considers the level of dominance each player reached during his time in the league, his individual statistics, the degree to which he impacted the fortunes of his team, and the extent to which he improved his teammates' level of play. Individual honors and quotes from teammates and opponents alike are used to support the rankings.

Covering NBA greats such as Bob Pettit, Bill Russell, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Michael Jordan, and Kobe Bryant, this book will appeal to basketball fans of all generations, and to any NBA fan interested in the history of the game.

It is a fun read but some stranges selections.

By Sigurður Einar Einarsson

I am a big NBA nerd and love reading books like this. I have over 100 NBA books and this one was a fun to read.

The author explains his selections and you will never agree 100% but some of them was so stranges for me. The worst one was placing Charles Barkley who is one of the top 5 PF of all time as a SF(that is something that is WRONG). Because it is fun to argue about Duncan/Malone/Barkley as PF. If you were going to place some one in a diffrent place then i would have put Duncan as a C, because lets face it he has beeing playing more C then PF in his playing time.

If you love the NBA and its history then i think you will like the book because i did.
