Dr. Puram's book "Stories from Srimad Bhagavatam" (SSB) contains stories from the Hindu holy scripture Srimad Bhagavatam. It is intended for those in the western world and the English speaking of India. The book has 52 chapters including three chapters of introduction. It is largely based on an authentic eight volume translation and commentary in Malayalam by Pandit Gopalan Nair. The original book Srimad Bhagavatam (S.B.) is one of the greatest of the Hindu scriptures and contains 18,000 verses in Sanskrit. The multitude of stories, narration style, vast number of characters and the complex relationship between characters make the reading difficult for a person unfamiliar with the background stories. In the original book (S.B.) stories pertaining to a character are often narrated in several different places making the comprehension of the book more difficult. The reading becomes more tedious because of the infusion of several verses or even chapters of philosophy and esoteric ideas within a story. The stories in this ancient scripture are so beautiful that they should not remain unknown to the vast majority. There has been several English translations and condensations of the book. Due to complexities, the translations normally will be read only by a serious reader and is not suited for the general reading population. The narration style of the condensations follow the same story telling style of the original and therefore can be challenging to some readers. Dr. Puram's book (SSB) makes a deviation from the condensations that have been published so far. The first three chapters of SSB contain an introduction to Hinduism, the story of Mahabharata and a summary of Srimad Bhagavatam. These three chapters provide a good introduction to readers unfamiliar with Hinduism and its epics. In each subsequent chapter one story of Srimad Bhagavatam is narrated without interjecting philosophical and esoteric discussions in the story. The narration in SSB assumes no knowledge or familiarity with stories from Hindu scriptures. Whenever characters appear in stories their relationships with characters who have already appeared in earlier stories are explained. Charts have been drawn to help the reader to understand the relationships between characters. The spirit of the stories cannot be conveyed without the use of Sanskrit words and for this reason the meanings of the words are explained as they appear. For completeness, in certain chapters interesting details from Mahabharatam and Ramayanam have been incorporated in the text. In some instances stories from other sources pertaining to the subject matter of a chapter are also included. Such stories are presented in a section called End Notes. This section may also contain pertinent esoteric comments or discussions. The book may be read without loss continuity even by skipping the End Section. The author narrates stories in a style that appeals to the young and old alike. He follows a simplified story telling style without the dialogs and esoteric discussions that appear in many of the Hindu epics and puranas.
